

His Voice

a devotion for our time from John Jauchen

He, the One who created the billions of galaxies, who keeps every single electron in motion, who knows our every day, He is the One who called us by name long before we were born.*

“I will be exalted among the nations,” is His declaration of truth. It is His promise to us during days of pandemic and fear. Even as life’s normal is swept away, it is good for us to remember that His voice has not stuttered.

Every morning, millions of national pastors, evangelists, and cell-group leaders, in virtually every nation of the world, sing His praises. In dangerous inner-city barrios and remote mountain villages His messengers live out the transforming power of the cross. Because of their faithful witness, people from a multitude of nationalities learn of the incomparable love of Christ.

In a world burdened by turmoil and distress, it is good for us to be still and pray. It is good for us to remember that God keeps His promises...

His voice has not stuttered.

“I will be exalted among the nations,” He says. “I will be exalted in all the earth,” is His voice speaks to our hearts today, and millions hear.
